

MONDAY, AUGUST 12, 2024 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

The notable lack of wind strength continues, with gusts barely scraping the double digits. This lack of wind should continue through Tuesday morning, eventually settling on a Southeastern breeze by Tuesday afternoon. It still appears that the atmosphere is safe from thunderstorms through Tuesday, with a complete lack of support until Wednesday afternoon. From there, we enter a period of potentially unsettled weather. Heavy rain is the primary threat, targeting Wednesday night and Thursday especially. At least 0.25" of rainfall appears likely, but more could easily stack up under heavier cells. The weekend provides a highly uncertain spread of solutions, with an optimistic note for Saturday.
