37TH U.S. WOMEN'S MID-AMATEUR · BRAE BURN

USGA

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2024 - 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Rain overnight wasn't anything more than a light spritz with the bucket not tipping once here at the clubhouse. Dewpoints are in mid free fall this morning after the passage of the cold front, down from 62 degrees to 49 degrees and will continue to fall drying out the surface even further as temperatures settle in the low 50s this morning ahead of the sun coming up. Clouds will be a distant memory as clear skies warm us up into the mid 60s just before lunch, topping out now in the low 70s this afternoon. Winds, rotating back up to the west/northwest after the boundary moved past us, flow will remain primarily from the west with hints of north throughout the day with speeds starting out light, picking up to 6 - 8 mph late this morning, topping out at 10 - 12 mph this afternoon with gusts pushing 20 mph at times. Monday will have another chilly start with conditions returning to near normal as highs Monday afternoon top out in the upper 70s with winds out of the west/southwest averaging 4 - 6 mph during morning play increasing slightly up to 7 - 9 mph allowing dewpoints to return back into the low 50s late Monday afternoon.
