

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 2026 – 2 PM WEATHER FORECAST

Dry and pleasant conditions will remain in place this afternoon through Monday as high pressure remains in place across western Oregon. Ample sunshine will allow temperatures to climb into the low to mid 70s this afternoon, while winds remain fairly light out of the north. Monday stays mild with a mix of clouds and sunshine and highs in the high 60s to low 70s, with generally light winds. The next change arrives Tuesday as a weak frontal boundary moves inland, bringing increasing cloud cover and a chance for a passing shower, although rainfall amounts should remain limited. Winds may increase modestly Tuesday as the boundary crosses the area, but no significant wind event is expected. Wednesday should remain mostly cloudy and comfortable with temperatures recovering into the lower 70s, while precipitation chances decrease as the disturbance weakens. By Thursday, high pressure should rebuild, bringing mostly sunny skies, lighter winds, dry conditions, and temperatures warming back into the mid-70s.
