

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 2026 – 2 PM WEATHER FORECAST

A pleasant afternoon is ahead for today, with a mix of sunshine and clouds and temperatures climbing into the lower 70s. Winds will remain light from the north to northwest at around 3–6 mph, keeping conditions comfortable through the afternoon. Tonight will stay dry with partly cloudy skies and temperatures dropping into the upper 40s to around 50 degrees. Tuesday brings the next change as a weak frontal boundary moves inland, increasing cloud cover and bringing a chance of showers, particularly during the afternoon and evening; rainfall should be light with no significant accumulation expected. Winds will remain generally light Tuesday, although they could become somewhat more noticeable as the boundary passes through. Wednesday should trend drier as the disturbance weakens, with mostly cloudy to partly sunny skies, highs in the lower 70s, and only a slight chance of a lingering shower early in the day. By Thursday, high pressure rebuilds across much of the Pacific Northwest, bringing mostly sunny skies, dry conditions, lighter winds, and warmer temperatures climbing into the mid-70s.
